Leonid Borisov, Icon, 2008, acrylic on canvas / Gallery Elena Shchukina
Welcome to Russian Art Week 2014

As Editor of Russian Art & Culture, I am pleased to present London’s latest edition of the Russian Art Week guide.

Russian Art Week is a biannual event which takes place in June and November. The major auction houses Bonhams, Christie’s, MacDougall’s and Sotheby’s all join together to present a series of Russian sales in London. Several Russian exhibitions and related cultural events also take place.

We hope you enjoy our guide to this major event. We aim to provide you with comprehensive listings of all sales, events and a directory of Russian auction houses, galleries, dealers and specialist institutions.

Our week this year also supports the UK-Russia Year of Culture in 2014. The British Council and Russian Embassy have organised an exciting programme of events across the country. This year Russian culture from ballet and theatre to film and literature will be presented.

I would like to thank everyone involved for all their support and all of our sponsors, including Elena Shchukina. Enjoy!

Theodora Clarke

“The History of Loot and Stolen Art”

Popular new book for art enthusiasts and historians.

A well-researched and beautifully illustrated history book told through graphic accounts of looting from antiquity to the present day. Relive the intrigues and dirty deals of emperors, kings, queens, popes, dictators, adventurers and explorers as they sought gold and famous artworks at any cost.

Available online at most leading book stores.

Bonhams holds two Russian art auctions a year, featuring works by major Russian 19th and 20th century masters. Their Russian Sale will include works from renowned Russian artists such as Ivan Aivazovsky and Nikolai Roerich, and a variety of Fabergé objects.

Fabergé, A two-colour jewelled and gold-mounted enamel photograph frame, c. 1890

Since 2004, Christie’s has achieved new world auction records for Russian artists in every single Russian art sale. The continuing strength of the Russian art market was confirmed by Christie’s most recent sales in June 2014, which saw them reach the highest total of all the auction houses with £24 million.
